

ENVIRONMENTAL, HEALTH AND SAFETY

ZERO HARM

Care for the earth and your well-being remain our highest priorities

Everyone wins when a contractor places safety and environmental care as its highest priorities.

That's our philosophy at Balfour Beatty Infrastructure, Inc. We back it up with an Environmental, Health and Safety (EH&S) department committed to continuous improvement.

Safe working practices help more than just the employees and subcontractors on a job. They also benefit the customer by keeping a project on schedule. Injuries can slow work, sometimes even bring it to a grinding halt. That's why we're careful to eliminate any safety shortcuts.

Our EH&S teams ensure the companies that work with us comply with all applicable laws and regulations. We use highly specialized, high-tech safety equipment on our job sites. Safety awareness remains high among our workers because of our rewards, incentives, training classes and daily briefings. Balfour Beatty Infrastructure's record speaks for itself, as demonstrated by the many safety awards we've received over the years.

Zero Harm

Our parent company, Balfour Beatty plc, has launched a new safety commitment to have "Zero Harm" across all businesses by 2012. The Zero Harm effort seeks to eliminate the risk of serious injury and the ruin of lives because of the company's work. Zero Harm means zero deaths, zero injuries to the public, zero disabling injuries to workers and zero environmental incidents. Zero Harm is about managing and designing out the risk from everything the company does across its businesses, so there is no realistic risk of a serious accident.

Environmental responsibility at the forefront

Care of our environment is another top priority for our EH&S team. We do everything necessary to make sure our employees and contractors comply strictly with all regulations and environmental standards. Among our many efforts in achieving this end are training sessions, multimedia presentations, crisis planning, site monitoring, and keeping current with all government regulations.

Proper care of the environment is of special concern to our companies because we often work in highly sensitive areas, such as pristine wetlands.

We take great pains on our worksites to ensure that no soil runs off into waterways and no hazardous material spills occur – nothing that might compromise the surrounding area.
